NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Sixth Annual General Meeting of the International Association of Deposit Insurers will be held on 2 November 2007 in Westin 1, level 2, at The Westin Hotel in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. Registration will be at 8:30 am and the meeting will begin at 9:00 am and it is expected to conclude by 11:30 am.

An agenda for the meeting will be issued in September 2007.

As provided in Article 14 of the Statutes of the International Association of Deposit Insurers, if a Member wishes to have an item added to the agenda of a General Meeting, the request must be provided to the Secretary General at least forty days (40) prior to the meeting.

DATED 3 August 2007 at Basel, Switzerland.
As IADI passes through its fifth year it is instructive to look back to when we started and at what has been accomplished. In that context, the idea to launch an international association first gained prominence at a conference hosted by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in 1998. Many of the delegates that left Washington were hopeful that work would soon begin on creating a forum for deposit insurers to share experiences and expertise. For one reason or another, the idea did not gain any real momentum.

When the Chairman of the Financial Stability Forum called on J.P. Sabourin and Ray LaBrosse in October 1999, we were not given much direction. It was clear that the development of guidance for deposit insurance systems could best be addressed by the practitioners. The starting point was a list of names and we were asked to invite them to participate on a Study Group. Once we had identified twelve organizations plus representatives of the Financial Stability Forum, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank we felt that we had a critical mass to consider the issue of the merits of developing guidance.

The Study Group’s report was accepted. We were then asked by the Financial Stability Forum to develop guidance, to consult widely and to deliver a report by September 2001. The Report contained twenty guidance points and it was backed up by sixteen discussion papers on practitioner-focused issues. A conference was held in Basel at the Bank for International Settlements (BIS) in October and 125 participants examined the Working Group’s Report in great detail. To benefit from such a large gathering, the broad parameters of an international association were discussed. A target of 1 May 2002 was set to bring about the creation of an organization which we hoped would make some dreams come true.

What would be the main parameters of the international association? In the first instance, we were clear that the group would be run by deposit insurers for the benefit of deposit insurance systems. We also wanted to ensure that each member would have a vote and no one organization or group of members would be able to dominate or direct the affairs of the new body. Its objectives would be to enhance the understanding of common issues, set out guidance, facilitate the sharing of expertise, provide advice on the establishment of systems and undertake research on deposit insurance issues. Picking a home for the association came rather easily when the then General Manager Andrew (now Sir Andrew) Crockett invited us to set up the Head Office in the Bank for International Settlements.

Were we successful? A small team worked up a set of Statutes and they were adopted at the Constituent Meeting without any changes on 6 May 2002. An Executive Council, Chair and Treasurer were elected and the Secretary General was appointed. The Association received tremendous support from Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation as they helped with administrative support and the Association’s funding in the early years and with other issues including the development and launch of the Web site. The latter would prove to be a key tool in supporting the business model of IADI – a small Secretariat, a working Executive Council and support from a full range of Standing and Regional Committees. The model works!
In reviewing our first Annual Report, we were reminded of several of our important early initiatives and accomplishments. The corporate identity was developed, a business plan with the first operating budget was approved, the Members agreed to a process for setting out guidance, participation grew and partnership arrangements were put into place with important players like the International Monetary Fund and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. A seminar on deposit insurance was held for countries in Central Asia and Eastern Europe, the Web site was launched and six newsletters were issued. It was a very busy period.

The second year presented a number of new challenges. An important one was holding the first conference outside the Bank for International Settlements. Our colleagues at the Korea Deposit Insurance Corporation were very gracious hosts and they welcomed 145 delegates from 50 jurisdictions. There was media coverage and banners were draped on the Korea Deposit Insurance Corporation building so that the commuters could understand the importance of the international event concerning deposit insurance being held in Seoul.

As representatives of IADI, we had very busy travel schedules which included: an Enterprise Risk Management Seminar in Basel, presentations on deposit insurance issues in Almaty, Taipei, Kiev, St. Petersburg, Venice, London, Ottawa, Brussels and Abuja. A Seminar on Deposit Insurance was held in December 2003 with the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development for 25 deposit insurers and other interested parties from the Western Balkans and the APEC Policy Dialogue on Deposit Insurance took place in Kuala Lumpur in April 2004.

The first guidance paper was developed by George Hanc and it was issued in February 2004. It focused on key questions related to the establishment and design of deposit insurance systems and there were soon to be a steady stream of Business Plans, Discussion Papers and Guidance Papers. On the operational side, the IADI By-laws were developed drawing on some of the best practices of our Members, a mechanism to amend the Statutes was instituted, and a policy of pro-rating annual fees to encourage organizations to join during the billing period was created.

Participation in the Association grew substantially during 2004/05. The SEACEN Training Centre was added as a Partner and applications were received from the Deposit Guarantee Fund in the Banking System (Romania), Bank Al-Maghrib, Fonds Collectif de Garantie des Dépôts (Morocco), the Bank Deposit Security Fund (Sudan), the Institut National de Garantie des Dépôts (Lebanon) and the Deposit Insurance and Credit Guarantee Corporation (a wholly owned subsidiary of Reserve Bank of India). The Bank of Thailand joined as an Associate and the Hong Kong Deposit Protection Board became a Member through the special transitioning provisions that allow Associates to become Members once they implement a deposit insurance system.

With other members of the Executive Council we delivered a special presentation on 27 June 2005 on the occasion of the 75th anniversary of the Bank for International Settlements. It was undertaken in English, French and Spanish and addressed the importance of interrelationships in promoting effective financial system safety nets, and how good relationships can strengthen them. It was an important venue to deliver that message.
The Third Annual Conference took place in Brunnen, the birthplace of Switzerland. Without a Member host for the event, the tasks fell onto the Secretariat who organized an impressive program and series of events that showcased and enhanced the reputation of IADI. A number of policies were also put into place in 2005/06 covering such matters as travel, governance, independence of members of the Executive Council and job descriptions.

The Fourth Annual Conference was held in Taipei, hosted by Central Deposit Insurance Corporation. The theme was “Challenges for Deposit Insurers in Resolving Bank Failures” and the papers that were presented provided the basis for the first-ever book on practitioner-focused deposit insurance. It was truly an impressive event made even more special through a celebration of their 20th anniversary and clearly showed why that organization was selected as the first recipient of the Deposit Insurance Organization of the Year Award, in 2005.

The period 2006/07 saw a number of important advances for the Association. As shown on the front cover of this Annual Report, membership rose to 47 (there were 48 Members at the end of July 2007) and that brought the total number of participants to 66 organizations, a second Enterprise Risk Management Seminar took place in Kuala Lumpur, we co-hosted a conference with the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and six articles were published in the October 2006 special issue of the Journal of Banking Regulation.

On the occasion of the Fifth Annual Conference, 175 individuals gathered in Rio de Janeiro under the conference theme “Raising the Bar” and the Chairman of the Conference, Antonio Carlos Bueno de Camargo Silva, welcomed the delegates by announcing in English and Portuguese that the conference was “Sold Out!”. Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation was selected as the Deposit Insurance Organization of the Year for 2006 and the work was undertaken to deliver a Symposium on Cross-Border Issues for Deposit Insurers. The Symposium was held on 3 May 2007 in connection with the fifth anniversary celebrations of IADI at the Bank for International Settlements.

Three important regional events were held during the first six months of 2006. On 6-8 March, the Africa Regional Committee held a Workshop on Bank Resolutions and Differential Premium Systems in Abuja. Later that month, the Asia Regional Committee had its fifth annual meeting which was followed by an international conference on “Enhancing the Effectiveness of Deposit Insurance Operations”. At the end of June, the first inter-regional meeting was followed by a conference organized by the North Africa and Middle East, Europe and Eurasia committees which was held in Istanbul.
Change happens. We see change everywhere we look, and in every sector. Sometimes change occurs because we want to get to places faster, in different ways, or due to changing environmental considerations. The transportation industry is one sector where we all see change. To help guide the development of IADI into its next phase, three strategic planning sessions were held recently – in Kuala Lumpur, hosted by Malaysia Deposit Insurance Corporation, in Arlington, VA hosted by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and a third one in Basel. After considering a full range of options, a restructuring of the Research and Guidance Committee was undertaken, along with some other changes, and it was agreed that three strategic thrusts for the next three to five years would be pursued – issuing IADI core principles and effective practices, training and development, and the promotion of the IADI brand. Taken together, initiatives were identified that will enhance the membership value proposition and attract more members. With these new guideposts in place, IADI will be well-positioned to prepare for its pre-teen years as a major international player promoting financial stability.

The authors did not accomplish all that IADI has done alone. The concerted effort of the Executive Council and the Members has been instrumental in much of what has been accomplished. Many of the individuals that helped along the way were singled out as recipients of the Founding Chairman’s Award that now hangs so proudly in our Head Office located in the Bank for International Settlements, an institution that has been so important to the growth and development of the Association.

It has been our pleasure and honour to work as a team to help create IADI and to guide this important and dynamic international association as it prepares to promote core principles and effective practices, training and development, and international cooperation into the future.

J. P. Sabourin
Chair of the Executive Council

John Raymond LaBrosse
Secretary General and President

30 June 2007
As we begin our fifth year of operations it is our pleasure to report on the activities and financial performance of the Association for 2006/07.

STRATEGIC PLANNING
A major area of focus over the past year was strategic planning as the Executive Council held three sessions to discuss ways to enhance our membership value proposition. To that end, the first session was held in Kuala Lumpur, hosted by the Malaysia Deposit Insurance Corporation, a second session took place in Arlington, VA, hosted by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and a third session was held at the Bank for International Settlements on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the Association. The Members will be presented with a business plan concerning the evolution of IADI and a number of targets have been identified as achievable within the next three to five years.

ENTERPRISE RISK MANAGEMENT
A seminar followed by a workshop on Enterprise Risk Management took place on 15–16 September 2006 and they were hosted by the Malaysia Deposit Insurance Corporation. The Seminar was conducted by Leon J. Bloom, Deputy Managing Partner, Deloitte & Touche LLP and it covered industry leading practices, the nature of building an Enterprise Risk Management Plan, and practical implementation issues in preparation for Basel II. This was the second time that IADI addressed Enterprise Risk Management and further work in this area is being undertaken by the Research and Guidance Committee.

CROSS-BORDER BANKING AND NATIONAL REGULATION
On 5–6 October 2006, the Ninth Annual International Finance Conference on International Financial Instability was co-hosted by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and the International Association of Deposit Insurers. The main theme was cross-border banking and national regulation and the conference included presentations from central bankers, scholars, deposit insurers, and other leading experts. The papers from the conference will be published by World Scientific by the end of 2007.

JOURNAL OF BANKING REGULATION
The Fourth Annual IADI Conference held in Taipei generated a number of high quality research and discussion papers. In October 2006, six of those papers were published in a special issue of the Journal of Banking Regulation (Volume 8, number 1). Those articles plus a number of other papers were combined into a book entitled “Deposit Insurance” which was published in June 2007 by Palgrave. Information on the book can be found on our web site.

FIFTH ANNUAL IADI CONFERENCE
The Fifth Annual Conference was held in Rio de Janeiro in November 2006. By all accounts the conference was a tremendous success as Fundo Garantidor de Créditos-FGC (Brazil) welcomed 175 delegates from around the world. The theme was “Raising the Bar”. The conference featured presentations from a number of international dignitaries and panels examined four discussion papers being developed by the Research and Guidance Committee – Funding, Claims and Recoveries, Mandates and Governance. The Guidance Group of the Research and Guidance Committee has developed a roadmap concerning the development of these and other guidance topics being considered by the Committee.
CROSS-BORDER SYMPOSIUM
On the occasion of the fifth anniversary, and as a prelude to the Second International Week of Deposit Insurance, a symposium on cross-border issues for deposit insurers was held on 3 May 2007 at the Bank for International Settlements. In addition to a session on setting out the issues, there was a very interesting examination of the liquidation aspects of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International case, one of the most infamous banking frauds of the 20th century. Attention then turned to burden-sharing and public awareness issues. The symposium provided a useful networking opportunity for IADI and it helped to advance the work plans of the Research and Guidance sub-groups on cross-border issues and public awareness.

FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS
As noted in the Management Discussion and Analysis section later in this report, revenues from Participants continued to grow and expenditures were lower than expected due to a number of factors. The end result was a surplus of US$ 63,723 and Member’s capital reached US$ 474,041.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS
We extend our gratitude to the representatives of the Participants in IADI for their support and confidence. The ongoing assistance of the Bank for International Settlements and Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation continue to be very important in helping us in meeting the needs of the Association.

The International Finance Conference on International Financial Instability was co-hosted by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and the International Association of Deposit Insurers.

The main theme of the Conference was “International Financial Instability: Cross-Border Banking and National Regulation.” It was opened by Michael H. Moskow and J. P. Sabourin who said that the two organizations were pleased to hold this important international conference and both expressed confidence that the event would provide the participants with an international forum to discuss key issues on cross-border banking and contribute to international cooperation among financial safety net players facing potential serious cross-border issues.

The first session analyzed the “Landscape of International Banking and Financial Crises.” Dirk Schoenmaker from the Ministry of Finance (Netherlands) led off with a presentation on the current state of cross-border banking activities and public policy issues resulting from that growing activity. He pointed out that while regulations are increasingly based on a global (Basel) or regional (EU) standard in response to the internationalization of banks, supervisory authorities, who should enforce these regulations are still nationally rooted with some elements of international and regional coordination. In this regard, he suggested that a formal supervisory structure in the European region would be beneficial to enhance legally binding cooperation between home and host authorities. Carl-Johan Lindgren, previously with the International Monetary Fund, then focused on actual and near-miss cross-border crises. He based his remarks on his experiences and concluded that cross-border crises may be caused by individual bank failures or systemic banking problems, but they are far rarer than commonly believed – although the potential for such crises is growing as a result of increased capital mobility, leveraging, financial market integration, and size of global financial conglomerates.

Sander Oosterloo, also from the Netherlands, delivered a presentation on Financial Stability Reviews. He drew attention to some relevant questions relating to the publication of Financial Stability Reviews. Luc Laeven, of the World Bank, pointed out that the five cross-border crises mentioned by Mr. Lindgren were highly related to periods of financial liberalization and internalization. He also mentioned that the failure of a large global bank could cause an ownership as well as a contagion crisis. In this regard, he said that policy cooperation among the countries concerned is critical to solve ownership crises.
The remarks of Stefan Ingves, Governor of the Sveriges Riksbank, proposed a new body he called the European Organization for Financial Supervision to address some of the problems of coordination in gathering information and producing a coherent and consistent assessment of the risks in major cross-border banks in Europe.

Session II focused on "Causes and Conditions for Cross-Border Instability Transmission and Threats to Stability", and the session was moderated by Craig Furfine, of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. In the first presentation, Bent Vale from Norges Bank explained the hypothetical contagion links of cross-border banking crises by examining the Nordic bank crises of the early 1990s. One important conclusion was that host countries eventually import banking instability and when combined with instability in the home country, hypothetical contagion events may happen when either a parent bank or its significant subsidiary fails.

Jon Danielsson, London School of Economics, analyzed the hidden linkages between cross-border currency crises and currency trading volumes. He noted that currency volumes are an important policy variable and within a contagion model it could help identify fragility, identify inter-country linkages, understanding the danger of contagious failure and the scope and importance of carry trades. He was followed by Triphon Phumiyasana who gave a presentation on the patterns of hedge funds by analyzing 1981–2006 data. The Discussant for the session was the IMF’s Gary Schinasi and he addressed some policy implications relating to oversight regimes – i.e. regulation, supervision, surveillance market discipline – for each cross-border instability channel.

“Prudential Supervision” was featured in Session III and Robert Eisenbeis, Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, led off by examining the issues surrounding the negative externalities that may occur under a large bank failure. He noted that the regulatory concerns about systemic risk should be directed first at closing institutions promptly, then at reforming bankruptcy statutes to admit special procedures for handling banking failures and to provide mechanisms to give creditors and borrowers prompt and immediate access to their funds and lines of credit.

Richard J. Herring of the University of Pennsylvania gave a presentation on conflicts and potential solutions between home and host country prudential supervisors. Mr. Herring concluded that a policy perspective may differ on whether a specific crisis resulting from the failure of a cross-border bank is systemic in either the parent bank or its foreign branch or subsidiary. Paul Wright from the U.K. Financial Services Authority then mentioned that effective (getting the job done) and efficient (minimizing costs and duplication for the regulated community) cross-border supervisory collaboration is, in reality, very difficult to achieve due to differences in supervisory authorities objectives, scope, powers, approach, risk preferences, skills and access. One important conclusion by the speaker was that it is desirable to have maximum feasible collaboration with the home country regulator when host country branches or subsidiaries are systemically important and ideal to fully rely on home supervisory authority when the branches or subsidiaries are not systemic.

Sheila C. Bair, Chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, addressed the issue of international supplemental capital measures, in her keynote address. She noted that while capital helps prevent a financial crisis, an effective deposit insurance system can mitigate its effects. In addition, she pointed out that an important key to global stability and confidence should be an international strategy for large bank resolution.
Session IV featured a look at the “Government Safety Nets” and Vitor Gaspar, Bank of Poland, examined the classic lender of last resort role of central banks. Mr. Gaspar said that it is very important to think about the issues of burden-sharing in cases of a financial crisis with significant cross-border effect. In this regard, he noted that Coase’s Theorem might provide a good approximation, to the outcome of negotiations among government and officials in an environment of costly bargaining and imperfect information. Michael H. Krimminger, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, focused on the key challenges faced by national authorities in responding to financial instability in a cross-border bank and identifying some practical responses. He noted that the home and host country authorities may face a mismatch between supervisory control, access to information, and responsibility for protecting the local economy.

Andrew P. Powell, Inter-American Development Bank (IDB), used an econometric model to show that with local deposit insurance, in a risky environment it will be in the interest of the bank to consider its liability limited to the capital invested and maintain a very low level of capital in the relevant subsidiary. The World Bank’s Thorsten Beck then analyzed the interaction of the different components — i.e. Deposit Insurance System (DIS), Bank Failure Resolution (BFR) and Lender of Last Resort (LLR), with a focus on ex-ante moral hazard problems. To avoid such conflict of interest and duplicative regulation efforts among financial safety net components, Mr. Beck noted that it is important to have institutional links or MOUs, information-sharing arrangements, consistent incentive structure among the financial safety net components.

In Session V on Insolvency Resolution, Rosa Maria Lastra, University of London, explored some of the various issues at stake in the cross-border resolution of banks, as well as an analysis of the status quo concerning crisis management in the EU, which illustrates the multi-faceted and complex nature of the problems involved in the effective resolution of failing or failed banks. David G. Mayes of the Bank of Finland focused on how the systemic risks can be reduced in a framework of large international banks whose operations run across national borders. He suggested in particular that in the European Union some form of international resolution agency be required.

Larry Wall, Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta noted that prompt corrective action seeks to minimize expected losses to the deposit insurer and taxpayer by limiting the supervisor’s ability to engage in forbearance and as well as prompt corrective action also should reduce banks’ incentive to engage in moral hazard behavior by reducing or eliminating the subsidy to risk-taking provided by mispriced deposit insurance.

Peter G. Brierley from the Bank of England commented that many suggested solutions for these international banks would require changes to legislation, bilateral deals would not really be an option, and supranational authorities as noted in David Mayes’ presentation is not yet practical. He concluded by stressing that improved cross-border cooperation may be the only realistic current option.

There was a luncheon speech delivered by Raghuram G. Rajan, International Monetary Fund, who said that we are experiencing a widespread phenomenon of high productivity growth, but low investment relative to desired savings, which has pushed down interest rates and pushed up asset prices. He further mentioned that with plentiful liquidity, investment managers have reduced the premia for risk as they search for yield.
Cross-Border Crisis Prevention: Public and Private Strategies was the focus of Session VI. Arnoud W. A. Boot, University of Amsterdam, explored some key issues related to supervisory arrangements in the EMU countries, and particularly those relating to the lender of last resort structure and crisis management, with a focus on the responsibilities and powers of individual countries vis-à-vis those at the European level (EU and ECB). One primary conclusion was that a centralization of the LLR function within the Euro countries is urgent, and actually could help facilitate convergence and centralization of prudential supervisory practices.

David S. Hoelscher delivered an overview of cross-border banking, challenges and options going forward in the context of the supervision and crisis management mechanism. Most issues addressed by the speaker were already discussed in the previous sessions. David Mengle of the International Swap and Derivatives Association looked at private sector crisis avoidance efforts with a focus on credit derivatives.

The final session took the form of a Policy Panel moderated by George Kaufman. The panel included Mutuo Hatano, Deposit Insurance Corporation of Japan, Andrey Melnikov, Deposit Insurance Agency (Russian Federation), Arthur J. Murton, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Guy Saint-Pierre, Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, and Lawrence R. Uhlick, Institute for International Bankers.

J.P. Sabourin delivered a brief look-back on IADI’s past four years during the closing dinner and he set out some future challenges for deposit insurers. He expressed a deep appreciation to the participants and organizers for their efforts in making the conference a great success.

The conference papers will be published by World Scientific in late 2007.
In presenting the Award at the Fifth Annual Conference held in Rio de Janeiro, J.P. Sabourin said that Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation (CDIC) had contributed an outstanding effort to the sound growth and development of the IADI. In particular, during the year, they have been active members of the Standing Committee on Research and Guidance, chaired a sub-group on Governance of Deposit Insurance Systems, co-chaired a sub-group on Funding of Deposit Insurance Systems, and served on the Advisory Group of the Research and Guidance Committee. As part of its commitment to improve the effectiveness of deposit insurance systems in contributing to financial stability, CDIC has developed, maintained, and is in the process of enhancing a data base to aid research and the development of guidance to improve the effectiveness of deposit insurance systems. As well, CDIC has generously responded to many requests through visits, missions and enquiries from other deposit insurers in an effort to share their expertise and best practices.

CDIC is a founding member of the Association. The Award, Deposit Insurance Organization of the Year, is conferred on a Member in celebration of an important achievement and/or in recognition of the contribution that the Member has made to the furtherance of IADI’s objects.

The award collectively recognizes the contribution of all the staff and management of the Member and is not intended to single out the work of just one individual.

Central Deposit Insurance Corporation was the first-ever recipient of this prestigious award in 2005.
The Conference was hosted by Fundo Garantidor de Créditos-FGC (Brazil) at the very beautiful Copacabana Palace Hotel in Rio de Janeiro from 15 to 17 November 2006. It was chaired by Antonio Carlos Bueno de Camargo Silva, CEO of FGC, Chair of the 2006 Conference Task Force, and member of the Executive Council of IADI.

The Conference was held under the theme “Raising the Bar” and the program featured presentations by internationally recognized experts and deposit insurance practitioners, regulators, policymakers and academics. Attention was focused on the discussion papers being developed by the Research and Guidance Committee, namely, governance, funding, claims and recoveries, mandates, as well as an important new training initiative for deposit insurance executives. The attendees were provided with an update on IADI’s activities and significant accomplishments over the past four years. The audience of 175 was truly international in scope as over 50 jurisdictions were represented.

Two other highlights of the week were the Special Workshop on Latin American Issues which provided an opportunity for the Latin American participants to share knowledge and expertise and the International Exhibition on Deposit Insurance which attracted 37 exhibitors.

The conference was opened by Antonio Carlos Bueno de Camargo Silva who thanked all the participants for attending the event and he hoped that they would learn and exchange experiences in the beautiful city of Rio de Janeiro. Gabriel Jorge Ferreira, Chair of the FGC Board, gave an introduction on the background of the establishment of the Fund in Brazil as a private entity, and its role... and administrative structure. Gustavo Loyola, former Governor of Central Bank of Brazil, described the challenges for FGC for the next few years and the role of the central bank in the banking system.

J. P. Sabourin highlighted the importance of governance of an organization. In line with the conference theme of “Raising the Bar” he noted it is aptly centered on governance, and went on to discuss three aspects of governance from the IADI’s perspective. Mr. Sabourin then touched on the IADI’s accomplishments during the past four years and offered some views on the strategic direction of IADI for the next three to five years.

The second session, moderated by Gregor C. Heinrich of the Bank for International Settlements, addressed the IADI draft paper on governance. Guy Saint-Pierre of Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation summarized the key elements of the discussion paper on governance, set out 14 suggested guidance points, and invited the comments of all interested parties on how to improve the discussion paper and guidance points. David G. Mayes of the Bank of Finland stressed that “getting the framework right for deposit insurance is a prerequisite for governance” and also highlighted the necessity of setting out the features that situate deposit insurance in the spectrum and that make it unique. Dalvinder Singh of Oxford Brookes University focused on how some of the issues in the proposed guidance are addressed in the U.K. and elsewhere. Paulo Sergio Cavalheiro provided a number of recommendations to further improve the paper including that the guidance points be separated out into high level guidance principles followed by more detailed good practices.

The luncheon address by Martin J. Gruenberg, Vice-Chairman of Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, focused on three topics: (1) the recent significant deposit insurance reforms enacted by the U.S. Congress which the FDIC will implement in 2007; (2) the important role that deposit insurance plays in maintaining the stability of banking systems around the world; and (3) the critical role that IADI plays in supporting deposit insurance agencies through information sharing, training, and guidance.

The third session, chaired by Maike B. Luedersen of the International Monetary Fund, discussed the draft paper on funding for deposit insurance systems. Dong Il Kim of Korea Deposit Insurance Corporation presented 12 suggested guidance points in relation to funding for deposit insurance systems, and the importance of adequate funding being in place so that a deposit insurer can meet its objectives of protecting small depositors and maintaining public confidence in deposit insurance. Bakhyt Mazhenova shared the experience of the Kazakhstan Deposit Insurance Fund in the area of funding of the deposit insurance system. Jean Roy, Ecole des Hautes Etudes Commerciales, underscored his support for the conclusions of the funding paper and hoped the quest for finding optimal funding arrangements for deposit insurers would be an ongoing process. Michael Wilson of JP MorganChase discussed the management of deposit insurance funds which would entail taking into consideration investment management goals, risk management and benchmark selection.

The last session of the day was about the training courses for Members to develop leaders for deposit insurance organizations. As a moderator, Ferru Tunç introduced the session by highlighting the importance of sharing deposit insurance expertise and knowledge worldwide. Winston Carr stated that the first IADI executive training program would be held in mid-July 2007 at the FDIC facilities in Arlington, VA. He emphasized that topics selected for this training event are unique for deposit insurers and cannot easily be studied elsewhere. Fred S. Carns mentioned that the Training and Conference Committee would assess training needs of its members on an ongoing basis. He indicated that the first program would be designed for the executive level and tailor-made training courses could be designed upon request to suit the training needs of operational level staff.
The dinner speaker, Jaime Caruana of the IMF and he addressed the positive developments for financial stability of the global financial system during the current period of significant changes in the financial markets. Mr. Caruana also encouraged IADI and the IMF to work closely to seek appropriate responses to changes in the financial environment.

Salvatore Milanese of KPMG delivered a presentation during the breakfast period on the second day dealing with transactions involving non-performing loans.

The final session of the conference discussed a guidance paper on designing effective mandates and Mutsuo Hatano, Deposit Insurance Corporation of Japan, presided over the session. Mohammed Al-Jafari of the Jordan Deposit Insurance Corporation defined deposit insurance mandates and stated different mandates of a number of countries, including the limitations of the classification and three basic types of deposit insurance systems — pay boxes, pay boxes with extended powers, and risk minimizing deposit insurance systems. He also highlighted the general guidance points for designing effective deposit insurance mandates. Alexander V. Turbanov shared with the audience Russian experience in managing the membership where banks needed to go through special procedures prior to their entry into the system, so as to control the insurance risks and contribute to an effective deposit insurance system. Antoinette McKain, Jamaica Deposit Insurance Corporation, underscored the significance of a mandate being aligned with public policy objectives and being publicly disclosed in legislation. The presentation of Richard J. Osterman, Jr. of the FDIC focused on resource availability in designing an effective deposit insurance mandate. He emphasized that funding, human resources and information technology provide vital support to the mandate of a deposit insurer.

Ray LaBrosse, the Secretary General, provided an update on the activities of the Association noting, in particular, the increase of the number of Members from 25 at its inception to 46 (at that time) and the significant accomplishments of IADI over the past four years. Wai Keen Lai of the Malaysia Deposit Insurance Corporation then invited everyone to come to Malaysia to attend the next annual conference.

Antonio Carlos Bueno de Camargo Silva was called upon to bring the conference to a close. J.P. Sabourin and John Raymond LaBrosse thanked the FGC team for the organization of the conference along with all the related events and the hospitality that was extended to all attendees. The conference came to a close under the beautiful melody of a famous Brazilian bossa nova song “The Girl from Ipanema”.

A special issue of the Journal of Banking Regulation was published in October 2006. It contained six papers that were originally presented at the Fourth Annual Conference held in Taipei from 27–29 September 2005.

WHAT WERE THE MAIN TOPICS IN THE SPECIAL EDITION?

In establishing a deposit insurance system, each country must consider what it hopes to achieve and whether the system that is established is internally consistent with its goals. The first article prepared by Christine Blair, Fred S. Cars and Rose Kushmeider of the FDIC discusses these issues and provides a series of questions designed to help evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of a deposit insurance system, recognizing that country-specific conditions and factors have a significant bearing on what a deposit insurance system could achieve and how it should be structured.

1 See also the “Guidance for Developing Effective Deposit Insurance Systems” (FSF Guidance) published by the Working Group on Deposit Insurance at the Financial Stability Forum in 2001. The FSF Guidance can be found at: http://www.fsforum.org/publications/publication_19_1.html
In the second article, David G. Mayes of the Bank of Finland examines two possible solutions to the problems of foreign-owned systemic bank branches. In doing so, he highlights the nature of the problems that exist when banks start operating on a cross-border basis, including potential concerns for deposit insurers. He contrasts a universalist solution – one that seeks greater regional harmonization – as pursued by the Nordic-Baltic countries with a territorial approach – that recognizes countries’ differences – as reflected by the experience of Australia and New Zealand.

With respect to the two well-known challenges for deposit insurance systems i.e. “moral hazard” generated by excessive risk taking and “poor agency behaviour” leading to excessive forbearance, George Kaufman, Loyola University, points out in his article that some attempts to correct these problems by directly changing the structure of deposit insurance through coinsurance, risk-based premiums, etc. have been tried but without much success. Hence, he proposes an indirect solution that focuses on efficient resolution of insolvent banks before their capital turns negative.

A key responsibility for a depositor protection organization is to be in a position, as soon as it begins operating, to reimburse depositors when a bank fails. The paper by John Raymond LaBrosse and David K. Walker (Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation) sets out some practical considerations regarding the advance planning that deposit protection organizations should consider doing in order to fulfill their mandates; particularly with respect to reimbursing depositor claims in a timely fashion after a bank failure.

Gulen Atay of the Asian Development Bank provides a lawyer’s perspective on the need for international cooperation in resolving bank failures. Much work is being done by a number of international and regional organisations in the area of identifying the appropriate legal, institutional and regulatory frameworks for bank insolvency. She focuses on numerous benefits that would result from the harmonization of laws and policies and greater regional integration of the banking sectors and financial markets.

In designing a deposit insurance system, policymakers should address the deposit insurer’s relationships and coordination with other financial safety net participants (SNPs). When the safety-net functions are assigned to different organisations, it is highly desirable to establish good interrelationships among them in order to resolve potential tensions related to the allocation of powers and responsibilities and to coordinate actions that will need to be taken. In this regard, Winston Carr of the Jamaica Deposit Insurance Corporation (JDIC) gives consideration to the need for coordination of efforts between all of the SNPs and provides practical advice to SNPs on how to promote interrelationships that will contribute to financial stability.2

In order to deal in a timely and effective manner with the impact of individual bank failures or systemic banking crises, many countries are seeking to enhance their mechanisms for dealing with problem institutions. The objective of the paper by William Su on behalf of IADI’s sub-committee on Developing Guidance for the Resolution of Bank Failures, is to develop general guidance for deposit insurers and other SNPs interested in establishing or enhancing their mechanisms for the resolution of failed or failing banks, and is designed to take into account different country circumstances, settings and structures.

For further information, please see the Journal of Banking Regulation Volume 8 Number 1, issued in October 2006 at the following website: www.palgrave-journals.com/jbr.

2 A sub-committee of the RGC was formed to extend the research in this area. In January 2006, the sub-committee provided General Guidance to Promote Effective Interrelationships among Financial Safety Net Participants. The paper can be found at (http://www.iadi.org).

General guidance for the resolution of bank failures

The Africa Regional Committee under the leadership of Ganiyu A. Ogunleye, Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer, Nigeria Deposit Insurance Corporation, held a Workshop on 6–8 March 2007. It examined bank resolutions and differential premium systems and the sessions were designed to help build capacity for middle staff of Members. The Workshop was held in Abuja and included participants from Canada, Turkey, Kenya, Tanzania, Zimbabwe, Nigeria and the Commission Bancaire de l’Afrique Centrale (COBAC) of Cameroon. In all, thirty-five delegates participated in the event.

One of the central focuses was the IADI General Guidance for the Resolution of Bank Failures. The Guidance covers, among other things, interrelationships and cross-border issues, powers and mandates, operational issues, and early intervention strategies. One of the central conclusions of the Workshop was that deposit insurers should conduct self-assessments using the Guidance as a benchmark. A number of other matters were explored notably, funding, governance, capacity of the financial sector to address post-consolidation issues and some case studies drawing on lessons learned from the experiences in Nigeria were explored in detail.

The Workshop also drew on the expertise of officials from some other jurisdictions. In consideration of some experiences related to Zimbabwe, the attendees explored the origins of the deposit insurance system in that country and the challenges that had been addressed. Foremost among them were the need for adequate capital standards, improved corporate governance, the importance of public disclosure, and ways to improve prompt corrective action.

With respect to Kenya, attention was drawn to an urgent need to terminate the liquidation processes of institutions whose valuable assets had been realized and where the continuation of the liquidation exercise was no longer sustainable. Other issues identified were: the difficulty of realizing on securities held in rural areas; low response rates to depositor claims; the need for proactive engagement before institutions become insolvent; loan recoveries being hampered by court processes; and the need for the harmonization of laws that govern the operations of the fund.

The Workshop then addressed a range of deposit insurance pricing regimes. Without a doubt, flat premium systems are the most prevalent but attention is increasingly being focused on differentiated pricing arrangements because of the clear advantages that are offered in introducing or adding to market discipline that can lower moral hazard. Cases were drawn from the U.S. experience, Canada, Turkey, the IADI Guidance issued on such systems and the particular challenges presented by developing countries in implementing these types of regimes.
Some of the key lessons that could be drawn from the workshop include the following:

- In order to ensure timely and effective resolution of bank failures, the existence of the following factors, amongst others, is imperative:
  - a supportive legal system;
  - effective disclosure and sound accounting regimes;
  - adequate statutory arrangements for the deposit insurance agency;
  - the need for effective public awareness mechanisms;
  - the importance of operational independence of the deposit insurer; and
  - the importance of effective asset disposal strategies.

- One of the critical technical issues to contend with in the design of a deposit insurance system is the establishment of an appropriate deposit insurance pricing structure;

- In implementing a differential premium system, there is the need to determine the appropriate balance between the desire to promote accountability, market discipline and sound management and the need to ensure confidentiality;

- Differentiated premium systems need to be regularly re-assessed as to their effectiveness and efficiency in meeting objectives and, if necessary, be up-dated/revised to meet changing conditions;

Success in the adoption of a differential premium system in developing countries depends on: financial system stability, sound accounting system, the existence of sound legal and supervisory regimes, expertise and experience on the part of the deposit insurer to design and run the differential system. Clearly, having a “buy-in” from the industry, depositors and other safety-net participants and adequate resources to undertake the development of the system is very important. In the short-run, the cost of such systems may appear to exceed the benefits for many deposit insurers in the developing countries but, in the long-run and under the right conditions, the benefits of a well-designed system can exceed costs.

The Workshop noted that differential premium systems require elaborate planning and should take into account local peculiarities. The participants improved their knowledge of such operations and the experiences shared were very valuable. As an aside, it was underscored that effective asset disposal strategies are critical to prompt reimbursement of uninsured deposits.

In the final Workshop session there was a clear message that the program was worthwhile and consideration should be given to similar events in the future.
The meeting was opened by Bui Khac Son, General Director of the Deposit Insurance of Vietnam (DIV). The Asia Regional Committee (ARC) Chair, Mutsuo Hatano, Deputy Governor of Deposit Insurance Corporation of Japan (DICJ), and participants from 13 institutions in the Asian region discussed a range of issues including membership promotion activities and regional participation in the upcoming AGM in Kuala Lumpur.

The meeting was followed by the international conference entitled “Enhancing the Effectiveness of Deposit Insurance Operation”. It was divided into three themes: 1. Legal Framework for Deposit Insurance, 2. Receivership and Resolution, and 3. Macro Policy on Deposit Insurance Operation.

The conference, co-hosted by the Asian Development Bank (ADB), began with opening remarks by Do Khac Hai, Chairman of DIV, which was followed by a speech by Le Duc Thuy, Governor of the State Bank of Vietnam. Speakers from many deposit insurers as well as the ADB and the World Bank delivered a number of interesting presentations, which provided the audience with many opportunities to discuss the latest issues. Two on-going projects being conducted by the Research Subcommittee within the ARC were also presented, namely, “Legal Framework of Deposit Insurance” by Korea Deposit Insurance Corporation as well as “Bridge Bank Schemes in the Asian Region” by DICJ.

With over 100 participants from 27 institutions in 26 jurisdictions, the International Conference was very well attended with some heated discussions among participants.

The Fifth ARC annual meeting and international conference on deposit insurance drew considerable attention from the local media. Over 50 journalists attended and posted stories in over 13 local newspapers. The National TV and Radio also covered the events.

The next ARC annual meeting will be hosted by the Indonesia Deposit Insurance Corporation; it will be held in Bali from 20 to 22 March 2008.
A joint meeting of the regional committees was held on 25 June 2007 and it included a presentation by J.P. Sabourin on the Differential Premium System Framework in Malaysia. It was followed on 26–27 June 2007 by the first Interregional Conference organized by the Europe, Eurasia and MENA regional committees. The host was the Savings Deposit Insurance Fund of Turkey (SDIF).

The main theme of the conference was “The Role of the Deposit Insurance Systems in Enhancing Financial Stability in Different Countries”. It aimed at reflecting and sharing the experience on different countries systems and practices, particularly the areas of: moral hazard, scope and limits of coverage, information sharing among safety-net players, bank failures, resolution and recoveries. The sessions were designed to reflect and discuss different systems’ experience in the related areas and to highlight in a comprehensive manner the role of the deposit insurers in enhancing financial stability in the regions.

The conference was opened by Mohammed Al-Jafari, Chairman of the MENA Regional Committee and the Conference Coordinator. He was followed by speeches by J.P. Sabourin, Chair of the Executive Council of IADI and Chief Executive Officer of Malaysia Deposit Insurance Corporation, Ahmet Ertürk, Chair of SDIF, and Tevfik Bilgin, Chairman of Banking Regulation and Supervision Agency of Turkey.

The conference was attended by over 100 participants from around the world and featured presentations by internationally recognized experts and deposit insurance practitioners, policymakers and academics.

At the end of the conference, a wrap-up session delivered by Dr. Al-Jafari, featured the significant remarks and valuable discussions of the participants from each session of the two-day conference. He underscored that the role of deposit insurance is being increasingly understood and recognized in the vast majority of countries. He added that there is a need to adopt and manage efficiently deposit insurance systems that protect less-sophisticated depositors as that will contribute to financial stability and minimize contagion effects. Dr. Al Jafari also highlighted the importance of closer cooperation and experience sharing at the regional and international levels, especially with the increasing number of depositor protection systems worldwide.

Presentations of the conference are available at the following location: http://www.tmsf.org.tr/2007conference/program.aspx
A symposium on cross-border deposit insurance issues was held at the Bank for International Settlements in Basel, Switzerland on 3 May 2007.

The Symposium was opened by John Raymond LaBrosse who said that the sessions would provide the participants with an international forum to discuss key issues on cross-border provision of deposit insurance and contribute to the international cooperation among financial safety net players facing potential cross-border financial crises.

What were the lessons learned from BCCI’s failure? Mr. Sabourin pointed out some of those lessons which complicated the liquidation process and asset recovery efforts:

- Different countries have different insolvency regimes for banks and branches.
- Liquidators in different jurisdictions have different objectives.
- The right of set-offs differs across bankruptcy regimes.
- Creditors may face uncertainty in some jurisdictions where assets paid out to creditors may be traced and reclaimed by liquidator.

1 BCCI was founded in 1972 and when the crisis was disclosed, the bank was operating approximately 400 branches, subsidiaries and affiliates in 73 countries with 15-20,000 employees. The statistics come from the presentation made by Michael Mackey, John Richards and Laurence Crowley during their remarks in the second panel.
Bryan Davies of Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation then addressed the importance of information-sharing among financial safety net players and the need for establishing a formal arrangement in that regard. Attention mainly focused on some general principles for formal information-sharing arrangements in a cross-border environment. Mr. Davies proposed four fundamental principles which can be a good starting point for furthering such information-sharing arrangement among different financial safety net players:

- First, formal agreements should clearly specify the roles and responsibilities of the respective parties;
- Second, they should set out what information is to be shared and by whom;
- Third, the confidentiality of information exchanged between parties must be respected at all times; and
- Fourth, when problems develop all parties are informed as soon as possible, and the necessary actions are taken promptly.

Martin J. Gruenberg, Vice Chairman, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, addressed the potential legal framework under which the FDIC would operate in resolving large complex bank failures. In addition, he discussed actions the FDIC is taking to ensure its readiness for such an event, as well as key international issues that would have to be considered in the event of a large bank failure. He emphasized that international regulatory groups such as the Basel Committee and IADI could play a constructive role in facilitating the development of international protocols to deal with operational issues as well as potential market consequences of a large bank failure.

The discussant was Edouard Fernandez-Bollo of the Commission Bancaire (France). He pointed out that regulators tend to be reluctant to make the state of a problem bank public so that they can avoid taking further responsibility relating to the bank failure. The supervisory authorities, he said, seem to have no incentive to make bank failures public when they don’t have any feasible solutions. This partly made the financial state of BCCI worse and drove the bank to a liquidation process.

Silvana Sejko of the Albanian Deposit Insurance Agency moderated the session. Michael Mackey and John Richards of Deloitte & Touche LLP and Laurence Crowley of Lovell’s jointly focused on the formal liquidation process of the BCCI including claims processing and asset recovery. The presenters provided the audience with insights on the challenges in liquidating BCCI. Mr. Richards said, “We had to make a decision within 48 hours at the time when BCCI was in crisis. We had no one to trust and no public information to rely on since consolidated regulation had not been conducted for the banking group. There were only the risks for some of the BCCI staff to move funds and destroy important bank records.” Mr. Crowley said, “No international treaties regarding cross-border failure existed before 1991. Hence, the liquidation process of BCCI was a challenging task for those who were involved in that task.” The lessons learned for deposit insurers from the BCCI case were also explored.

Panel three focused on how to allocate the costs of a cross-border failure. The FDIC’s Michael Krimminger led off by examining the key challenges faced by national authorities in managing cross-border crises and identifying some of those practical steps. Mr. Krimminger pointed out that cross-border differences in powers and other operational designs of deposit insurers make the burden sharing issues even more complex. He said that differences in national goals affect home and host incentives in fulfilling their financial safety net functions. He also raised some practical questions for deposit insurers to think about in dealing with cross-border burden sharing issues.

Eva Hüpkes of the Swiss Federal Banking Commission began her presentation by asking who killed burden sharing?. She said, “Burden sharing is not talked about because there is fear that it will increase moral hazard and... this issue is politically sensitive. Considering that existing insolvency arrangements and deposit insurance frameworks provide a key for burden sharing, Ms. Hüpkes asked: what is the burden in a bank failure and what are the factors determining the burden on deposit insurers, the individual creditor’s loss and the impact on the financial system and the economy? She then addressed the fairness issues in burden sharing arrangements that may arise from differences in deposit insurance coverage, insolvency regimes, jurisdictions where assets and liabilities are located, the systemic relevance of a foreign bank in home and host country. She concluded that it is still useful to achieve a better understanding of existing frameworks and to work in a cross-border context to address conflicts.

After the panels, three workshops were held concurrently with discussions on: (1) model agreements for cross-border cooperation; (2) public awareness and consumer protection – core elements and effective practices and; (3) resolution implementation. Many important remarks were made by the workshop moderators and discussants.4 They gave brief reports on what had been discussed during the workshops. In closing, Mr. Sabourin set out some future challenges for deposit insurers in dealing with a cross-border crisis. He expressed a deep appreciation to the participants and organizers for their efforts in making the Symposium a great success.

1 The workshops were moderated by Bryan Davies, Johnson C.S. Chen and Martin J. Gruenberg. The participants included Stefan Walter, Basel Committee of Banking Supervision; David S. Hoelscher, IMF; and Rupert Thorne, Financial Stability Forum.
The Second International Deposit Insurance Week was held from 7–13 May 2007 as a joint initiative to promote awareness of depositor protection arrangements. The theme was “Consumer Protection” and it was held in conjunction with the Associations’ Fifth Anniversary.

Activities took place around the world in celebration of the Second International Week of Deposit Insurance. This is a partial list.

In Switzerland, following the Symposium on Cross-Border Deposit Insurance Issues on 3 May 2007 and a celebration of the Fifth Anniversary of the Association at the Bank for International Settlements, the International Association of Deposit Insurers published Profiles on the Association in eight languages, plus eight Regional Updates and special Profiles on several Partners and Observers.

In Taiwan, a special feature was placed in the 7 May issue of Time magazine which outlined the mission of IADI and provide a brief on the Research and Guidance Committee chaired by Johnson C.S. Chen, President of the Central Deposit Insurance Corporation. It noted that IADI would be publishing core principles and effective practices dealing firstly with Governance, Funding, Mandates and Claims and Recoveries.

In Malaysia, Malaysia Deposit Insurance Corporation organized broadcast and print media advertisements, special advertisements in major national newspapers, exclusive media interviews and briefings.

The Hong Kong Deposit Protection Board organized a series of publicity campaigns aimed at raising the public’s awareness of the Deposit Protection System. During the week of 6 May, there were TV advertisements, on-line advertising on web pages and other internet communication tools, the publication of comic strips in newspapers and a roving exhibition at public housing sites.

In Bulgaria, there was a Press Release issued announcing the International Week, media interviews were held with the Chairman of the Bulgarian Deposit Insurance Fund (BDIF), notices were placed in newspapers and in electronic media on the features of the deposit insurance system, and there was the release of an updated version, including the new design of the Q&A Brochure on Deposit Insurance, which was posted on their website and which will be printed in a run of 30,000 for distribution to the banks free of charge.

In El Salvador, there was a special publication in local newspapers and a Press Office Notice was issued on 6 May 2007.
In Albania, from 7–11 May, there was a seminar on the Principles of Bank Resolution and Receivership attended by representatives of the Deposit Insurance Agency, Bank of Albania, and officials from regional supervisory authorities. The presenters came from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

In Kazakhstan, a publication was released dealing with the manner in which depositors are reimbursed following a bank failure, interviews were held on TV, and a telephone “hotline” was activated which can be used by the public to obtain information free of charge about deposit insurance coverage.

In the Philippines, there were TV interviews of officials from the Philippine Deposit Insurance Corporation as well as special articles on the International Week of Deposit Insurance. On 9 May, PDIC signed a multilateral Memorandum of Understanding on extending its financial literacy education program to the college level. The signing took place at the Philippine Stock Exchange with media in attendance.

The week was marked by two significant interviews by Alexander Turbanov, General Director of the Deposit Insurance Agency (Russian Federation), which will be published in the business media. The Agency started a new project as part of a federal program of financial literacy and education. A consumer-focused comprehensive glossary was published which includes explanation of terms and expressions used in publications on deposit insurance issues. The glossary is targeted at less financially sophisticated individuals and aimed at improving the level of economic literacy of Russian citizens. The glossary will help journalists understand banking and deposit insurance terminology when writing articles on banking.

In Venezuela, Fondo de Garantía de Depósitos y Protección al Ahorro Bancario launched improvements to its web site in order to provide relevant information to the public about its Mission, Vision and Purpose, and it also includes questions and answers about how the Venezuelan deposit insurance system works, in order to promote greater public understanding.
Sixth Annual Conference and AGM
Kuala Lumpur – Malaysia
31 October–1 November 2007
SEVENTH ANNUAL CONFERENCE
AND AGM
WASHINGTON – USA
SAVE THE WEEK 27–31 OCTOBER 2008

HOSTED BY THE
FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION
MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION AND OPERATIONS

This management discussion and analysis is as of 16 June 2007 and should be read in conjunction with the audited financial statements for the year ended 31 March 2007 and the related notes included thereto. The financial statements are prepared in accordance with Swiss Auditing Standards. All amounts are expressed in US$ unless otherwise indicated.

OVERVIEW
IADI is the international voice of deposit insurers focused on contributing to the enhancement of deposit insurance effectiveness by promoting guidance and international cooperation. Our current efforts are focused on sharing our deposit insurance expertise with the world.

The Association receives annual fees from its Participants. There are no fees assessed on organizations with which IADI has entered into partnership arrangements. Invoices were issued in July 2006 covering annual fees and initial capital contributions of Members for the billing period which began on 1 July 2006 and ended on 30 June 2007. The Update to the 2005/2007 Business Plan that was approved by the Members on 15 November 2006 included an operating budget for 2006/2007 and a forecast budget for 2007/2008, based on the new financial year end. As of 31 March 2007, Members equity was US$ 474,041 compared to US$ 360,318 at the end of the previous reporting period; available funds are invested in accordance with an investment policy approved by the Executive Council.

PLANNING ASSUMPTIONS FOR 2006/2007
Assumptions were embodied in the Business Plan adopted on 15 November 2006 and they underline the business strategies and related initiatives:

1. IADI’s statutory objects were not expected to change during the planning period;
2. No change in annual fees or increases in capital contributions was anticipated;
3. The US$/CHF exchange rate was expected to remain at 1.26 and the US$/CAD exchange rate was expected to remain at 1.13 (Expenses in currencies other than US$ are covered as soon as possible to avoid unexpected expenses due to exchange rate movements);
4. The total number of IADI Members would remain at 44;
5. Investment revenue would continue to be held in a highly liquid form pursuant to an investment policy to be approved by the Executive Council; and
6. The annual yield on investments was not expected to be more than 2 per cent.

FINANCIAL PERFORMANCE
Revenues of IADI are collected in U.S. dollars while expenditures are typically made in other currencies. For planning purposes it was assumed that the US$/CHF exchange rate was expected to remain at 1.26 and the US$/CAD exchange rate was expected to remain at 1.13. It is important to note that the US$ against the CHF ranged from 1.18 to 1.31 with an average of 1.23 and the US$ against the CAD ranged from 1.09 to 1.18 with an average of 1.23 over the course of 2006/2007. While the average exchange rates are close to the planning assumptions the recorded expenditures in US$ are materially affected by the actual exchange rates that are used when transactions in foreign currencies occur. The variance of the US$/CHF of 8 per cent and the variance of 11 per cent for the US$/CAD can have an important impact on the expenditure accounts recorded in U.S. dollars. To guard against movements of the U.S. dollars against the two key currencies relevant to IADI, the Secretariat purchases its CHF and CAD needs as soon as practicable at the beginning of the financial year in accordance with the Investment policy approved by the Executive Council.
The financial highlights for 2006/2007 compared to the projections that were included in the Business Plan approved on 15 November 2006 are shown in the table below.

Taking those results into account unrestricted net assets (i.e. Members’ capital) of the Association was US$ 474,041 at 31 March 2007.

THE ROLE OF THE CHAIRMAN

J.P. Sabourin, the Chair of the Executive Council and President, attended an Open House hosted by the Deposit Insurance Corporation of Japan and one hosted by the Korea Deposit Insurance Corporation and the cost of those trips was not absorbed by IADI. While in Korea, Mr. Sabourin was asked to do a number of media interviews to promote and enhance IADI and he also supported a number of activities of the KDIC.

In March 2007, the Chair attended an Asia Regional Committee hosted by Deposit Insurance of Vietnam and he undertook a number of media interviews.

The fact that the travel costs of the Chair noted above over 2006/2007 were absorbed by the Malaysia Deposit Insurance Corporation resulted in substantial savings for IADI.

The net result for 2006/2007 was a surplus of US$ 63,723 which compares very favourably to the US$ 12,550 anticipated previously. The table below recaps the surplus and deficit situation since the inception of IADI.

Revenues were US$ 17,022 higher than predicted because of the increase in the number of Participants in the Association and higher interest income.

Expenditures were US$ 468,999 which was US$ 34,151 lower than expected. The contributing factors were the less than expected number of per diems charged by the Secretary General for his services, a gain on foreign exchange transactions, and lower than expected meeting expenses which were offset to a large extent by higher travel costs. Expenditures on Web site-related matters were higher than expected as improvements were made to the Web site and the services of a webmaster were retained to implement the new functionality.

The expenditure of US$ 41,607 on the annual conference includes the US$ 35,000 provided to the conference host plus registrations paid by the Secretariat for a number of the speakers and representatives of the Observers that attended the event.

The net result for 2006/2007 was a surplus of US$ 63,723 which compares very favourably to the US$ 12,550 anticipated previously. The table below recaps the surplus and deficit situation since the inception of IADI.

The governing bodies of the Association are the General Meeting of Members and the Executive Council. The Executive Council has established Standing Committees covering Audit, Training and Conferences, Research and Guidance, Membership and Communications, Finance and Planning, and Governance. Seven regional committees have been established (Africa, Asia, the Caribbean, Eurasia, Europe, Latin America, and the Middle East & North Africa). The Secretary General acts as the Secretary to the Executive Council supported by the Deputy Secretary General.

The Executive Council is composed of individuals who govern the business and affairs of the IADI. Jean Pierre Sabourin, Chief Executive Officer of the Malaysia Deposit Insurance Corporation, is the Chair of the Executive Council and acts as President of the Association. The Treasurer is Bakhyt Mazhenova, General Director Kazakhstan Deposit Insurance Fund.

2. SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

The accounts of IADI are drawn up on the historical cost basis and income and expense items are recorded on the accrual basis. At the Annual General Meeting held on 27 September 2005 in Taipei, the Members agreed to change the financial reporting year end from 30 June to 31 March. This change was implemented on 1 July 2005 and this has resulted in a 9-month accounting period for the comparative information in the financial statements this year.

A. Scope of the financial statements

These financial statements contain all assets and liabilities that are controlled by the Association and in respect of which the economic benefits as well as the rights and obligations lie predominantly with the Association.
B. Functional and presentation currency
The presentation currency of the financial statements is U.S. dollars.
Being an international organisation the Association is exposed to various currencies when conducting its activities. The main currencies the Association deals in are U.S. dollars, Canadian dollars and Swiss francs.
All transactions are recorded in U.S. dollars at the exchange rates ruling at the date of the transaction.
Exchange differences arising from the retranslation of monetary assets and liabilities are included as net foreign exchange gains or losses in the statement of activities.

C. Cash
The Association considers cash to be current bank accounts.

D. Investments held to maturity
Investments are made in accordance with the investment policy approved by the Executive Council on 30 September 2005.
Treasury bills are accounted for by using an effective interest rate basis. All returns from cash and investments are accounted for in Interest Income.

E. Accounts Receivable and Accounts Payable Accounts receivable and accounts payable are principally short-term amounts relating to the settlement of transactions as a result of activities of the organisation. They are included in the balance sheet at cost.

F. Fixed Assets
The fixed assets are capitalised and depreciated on a straight line basis over the estimated useful lives of the assets concerned, as follows:
Information Technology Equipment – 4 years

G. Provisions for bad debts
Provisions are recognised, as a charge to the statement of activities, if the Association has a concern over the recovery of outstanding accounts receivable.

3. SENSITIVITY TO FOREIGN EXCHANGE MOVEMENTS
The U.S. dollar denominated results in the financial statements are affected by fluctuations in the U.S. dollar against Canadian dollars and Swiss francs. Accordingly, movements of foreign exchange rates over the course of a financial year can have a significant impact on the finances of the Association.

4. BENEFITS RECEIVED
The Association is hosted by the Bank for International Settlements, Basel and benefits from administration, accounting and other advisory services provided by the Bank for International Settlements. The total amount of these benefits has not been determined.
5. INCOME TAXES
The Association is exempt from income tax.
